Location of the event	Stavropol, Dzerzhinskiy str., 158, office 501
The person being interviewed	Barutchev Artyom Mikhailovich
Initiator	Barutchev Artyom Mikhailovich
The original data	Oral information of the Initiator and the Interviewee persons

Research objectives

The Initiator provided questions to be clarified. As far as possible, the questions were adapted into the survey program and reflected in the following tasks.

Main tasks:

Are reactions revealed in the course of a psychophysiological study using a polygraph, indicating that Barutchev A.M. He was subjected to cyber torture.

Are psychophysiological studies revealing the following with the help of a polygraph, reactions indicating that A.M. Barutchev was subjected to cyber harassment.

*In the PFI, in accordance with the information provided by the Interviewee, and in agreement with him, it is claimed that cyber-torture is the torture that was committed against the Interviewee using some unknown technologies unknown to him and unidentified persons.

Additional tasks:

With regard to cyber-torture and cyber harassment, the interviewee wishes to confirm the veracity of the following information provided to them:

He has been subjected to cyber-torture since 2009.

Currently, he is sometimes subject to cyber-torture.

Previously, I felt cyber harassment.

Nowadays, sometimes cyber-harassment

I heard how one of the representatives of the militia of the USSR or Russia transformed his voice.

I heard how the Hungarian Guards transformed their voice.

There are people who can confirm that he was subjected to cyber-harassment.

There are witnesses who can confirm cyber-harassment of him.

As evidence of cyber harassment, the Interviewee had impurities on his body, on his head, and in his nose. I experienced pain in my genitals from cyber-torture. As a result of cyber-torture, the genitals were injured. I felt the pain of cyber-torture in my head, in my left chest, in the anal area. In a migration camp in Hungary, the voice of the guards was transformed without visible adaptations.

In a migration camp in Hungary, without visible adaptations, the voice of migrants was transformed.

I found hair from the human body at home in Budapest on the table, on the dishes.

In the migration camp, and without the presence of others, hair from the human body appeared in food and in the mouth.

The keys to the apartment disappeared without the presence of anyone nearby. Suddenly, the keys appeared in the presence of witnesses.

As a result of cyber-torture, he felt like his body was not listening to you.
 Other people saw that his body was not listening.
 He can identify some of the Strangers who have transformed their voices, some he cannot identify.
 With the help of some technology unknown to him, he was subjected to violence.
 With the help of some technology unknown to him, he was sexually touched.
 He does not suffer from auditory and visual hallucinations.
 He feels like his body is not obeying because of some technology. He was interrogated during cyber-harassment. Experiments were performed on his brain by unidentified persons unknown to him

Remembers the process of experience.

With the help of some technology used against his will, he swallowed There's something unnatural inside.
 There was vomiting of semen.

As a result of cyber-torture, marks appeared on the body similar to beatings.
 In the past, I have seen drawings of some people who use modern brands.

*The PFI has limitations on the response time of the Interviewees due to the reasons for their adaptation or the onset of fatigue. These restrictions are standardized and are enclosed in a time frame from 40 to 120 minutes with sensors connected to the body of the person being interviewed.
 Adaptation/fatigue is reflected in the disappearance of the normal psychophysiological reactivity of the Interviewee recorded by the polygraph and the absence of the possibility of obtaining data to form conclusions. Therefore, first of all, the main testing time is occupied by solving the main / priority task, and then, depending on the condition of the person being interviewed and the rest of the time
 , additional tasks. The solution of the latter depends on the individual characteristics , reflected in his psychophysiological reactions, mainly in maintaining activity through the KGR polygraph channel (galvanic skin reaction ).
 Each test is presented the required number of times according to the method (from two to five) = significant time costs.

As a standard, one of the four conclusions is formed as a result of the PFI:

- 1) Reactions indicating the involvement of K.
- 2) Reactions indicating involvement have not been identified.
- 3) Conclusions cannot be drawn based on the reactions received.
- 4) Opposition to PFI.

At the same time, using a polygraph, the dynamics of the psychophysiological reactions of the Interviewee in response to the presented stimuli was monitored by translating physiological indicators of the activity of the respiratory, cardiovascular system, electrical activity of the skin, etc. into electrical signals displayed in the form of graphs, collectively forming a polygram. The psychophysiological reactions of the Interviewee recorded in the form of polygrams in accordance with her answers to the presented stimuli/questions were stored in computer memory, where the x coordinate reflects time, the Y coordinate reflects the level of response. In accordance with the designations of the polygraph software, a plus "+" on the polygram corresponds to a positive answer "Yes" received (by the patient, a minus "-" corresponds to a negative answer "No". A polygram file in inq format. The methods used	In order to solve the tasks assigned to the specialist, installation and verification tests have been prepared. were For a set of statistical data, the interviewee. The tests were presented must be interviewed the required number of times. The data recorded during the FII was analyzed and evaluated by a specialist. The verification tests also contained questions neutral, control of a verification nature. In accordance with the methodology of control questions, also called the methodology of comparison questions, it is believed that a false answer to a Verification question causes a stronger psychophysiological reaction than a response to a Control question. Conclusions are drawn based on a comparison of the psychophysiological reactions of the interviewee. According to this methodology, Control questions are of an auxiliary nature and are used in the comparative assessment of the reactions caused by them with reactions to Verification questions. The immediate purpose of setting Control questions is to cause a strong psychophysiological reaction. Verification questions are questions that are formed based on case materials, testimony, information or explanations of the Interviewees, and are aimed at solving the tasks of the PFI. The verification questions are used to identify the psychophysiological reactions of the person being interviewed, and further compare them with the reactions received to the Control questions. Conclusions are drawn based on a comparison of the obtained psychophysiological reactions of the interviewee. Conclusions are drawn based on a comparison of severity the resulting psychophysiological reactions. In order to ensure an objective reflection of the subjective significance of the stimulus for the individual, the interviewee was instructed to answer all questions truthfully before submitting tests using the control question method. In the positive control set of questions, the interviewee was additionally instructed.
Preliminary information	Prior to the start of the PFI, preliminary tuning tests (stimulation, then steam tests) were presented. The background indicators of the psychophysiological activity of the Interviewee were studied. The reactions obtained adequately reflect the degree of significance of the presented stimuli.
Conclusions	According to the main tasks of the PFI: During a psychophysiological examination using a polygraph, Artam Mikhailovich Barutchev had reactions indicating that he had been subjected to cyber-torture. During a psychophysiological examination using a polygraph, Artem Mikhailovich Barutchev had reactions indicating that he had been subjected to cyber harassment. Conclusions on additional tasks: Received by A.M.
